Suicides.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—The coroner this morning received by mail the following letter: "Nov. 22 Mr. Coroner: To-night I drown myself. If I am found you will find my name and $10 in my pantaloons pocket, all in ten cent pieces, to defray my funeral expenses. The most miserable, selfish, nasty, lot of people are here in this humbug state. The California department in hell is overcrowded and wants an extra fireman, and I am going there to make it red hot for them. The letter was unsigned and the body has not yet turned up.

Matters in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—At a meeting of the trade assembly held last evening a strike among the tailors of the city was reported, which promises to be continued unless some amicable terms be arranged. A. J. Lyons of the committee appointed to visit the state prison made a lengthy report with a view of showing the alarming extent to which convict labor in the state comes in competition with free labor on the outside. Shoemakers are reported as having communicated with prominent manufacturers of the subject of supplanting Chinese by white labor, but had received an unsatisfactory answer.

A mass meeting was held last evening at Union hall by citizens of San Francisco to express their feeling in regard to the granting by the board of supervisors a franchise to the railroad company to use the water front of the city. Their meeting was very largely attended. Speeches were made by several prominent speakers on the question. From sentiments expressed by speakers and the action of the meeting there seemed to be unanimous public feeling against the proposition for the board of supervisors to grant the desired franchise.

SAN JOSE, Nov. 23.—At 4 P. M. to-day Miss Scully, domestic at the house of E. P. Reed, insurance agent, was severely, if not fatally, burned. Grant the Power Behind the Throne—Restored and Revivified by Arthur's Accession.

[Dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4.—Senator Vest (bitter Bourbon) arrived from Washington this morning. In an interview published in an afternoon paper, he says:

"These are the halcyon days for the 306. Missouri is Filley's private and personal property. Why, I have seen applications on file in the departments with 'approved, C. I. Filley,' written across them, as though he were president of the United States. What Filley is in Missouri, Miller is in Kentucky, and the other members of the legion in every other state. Whatever man can be found who was faithful in Chicago, he is rewarded with everything he asks. Logan is the mouthpiece of the administration. He represents the stalwart idea."

"Will Filley get the postmastership?"

"I can't say. The power is all in the hands of the extreme stalwarts, and they will do as they choose. They are preparing for 1884, and those men who will be the most useful then are being taken care of now."

"Do you believe that Grant will come before the convention of 1884?"

"No, I do not. Grant is getting old, and he wants the real control of power rather than the fuss and annoyance of active politics. He will remain the power behind the throne."

"Then who will lead the republicans?"

"Arthur is probably fixing for a re-nomination; but if he finds it inexpedient, then the whole force of the administration will be thrown into the scales for Conkling. It is felt that his hour is at hand. Arthur is a shrewd politician, and the machine is being brought into working order rapidly all over the country."

"What do you think Conkling can do with New York?"

"Of course Conkling has to fight against the consequences of his stupendous blunder in resigning. It may take him some time to retrieve his position, but Conkling takes to politics as naturally as a fish to water, and he will win back all he has lost. There is no doubt that the fighting element in New York politics is heartily with Conkling, and, with this as a basis to trade upon, he will regain everything. Conkling is, first, last and all the time, a trader."

"Is the machine now in motion everywhere?"

"Oh, yes. Take Green B. Raum, for instance, the civil service reformer. He has assessed every employee of the revenue service $3 for campaign purposes in Virginia."

SOUR GRAPES.

"What do you think of David Davis?"

"He is a weak, vain old man, who is anxious to hold that bauble of the temporary chairmanship of the presidential succession at any cost. I am thoroughly satisfied with our position in the senate, for we are strong enough to dispose of any legislation we do not like. The democratic party holds a veto on the laws of the country which can be used to advantage."

"What is going to become of Blaine?"

"Of course the disruption of the republican party will continue. This is a life and death fight between Blaine and the stalwarts. Nothing but complete victory on one side and utter destruction on the other will ever satisfy the enemies. Now, Blaine's great difficulty is his health. I saw him the other day, and he looked feebler than before. He seems to be wearing out. If his health is good, Blaine will win. With all his faculties about him and in play, Blaine is more than a match for the administration, even giving it the odds of the machine."

Western Oregon.

Dr. Wm. Lister died at the residence of his son-in-law, J. J. Murphy of Salem, on the morning of the 21st inst.

The county assessor of Marion county failed to assess Abiqua precinct. Sheriff Ramsay is supplying the deficiency by himself seeing the property-holders of that section.

Andrew Frazier, who lived alone near the fair grounds at Salem, was found dead in his house on the 20th inst. Medical examination showed that the cause of his death was heart disease.

Washington Territory.

High winds, heavy rains, three inches of snow and thermometer six degrees above zero, was the weather record at Waitsburg during last week.

Public schools in Waitsburg have closed until January 1st as a precautionary measure against smallpox. That town has as yet been wholly exempt from the disease.

Farmers in the region of Ft. Colville have lost heavily of their crops the past season. There have been but few fair days there since the 15th of September, and much of the grain was left standing in the field, and quite a large amount of that which was threshed will be lost, it being very wet at the time of threshing.

The Cincinnati Commercial is becoming exasperated at the delay in meting out justice to Guiteau, and says: "The latter we print to-day announcing an organization in Ohio is not a joke. The murderer must surely die, and that soon. The fumbling delays are irritating, disgusting, and exasperating, and those who promote or permit delay are under observation."

THE GUITEAU TRIAL.

The Examination of Defendant's Witnesses Commenced.

GUITEAU MONOLIZES MUCH OF THE DAY'S REPORT

By his Constant Interruptions of Counsel, Court and Witnesses—He Shows an Amount of Egotism and Assurance Seldom Equaled.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Attendance in the criminal court this morning was considerably diminished on account of a rain-storm. While Guiteau was taking his breakfast at the city hall he expressed dissatisfaction at the release of Jones upon bail. When court opened Scoville made formal request for papers taken from Guiteau at the time of his arrest, stating they were material evidence for defense and since prosecution had not needed them he could see no reason why they should be withheld. The district attorney offered to furnish copies of papers, but Scoville insisted upon his rights in the matter and asked for the originals.

Pending discussion Guiteau insisted upon being heard, and said: "I can throw light upon this. At the time of my arrest I had forty or fifty editorial slips showing the political situation in May and June. These slips show a hundred and one forces that impelled me on to shoot the president. They are very important as showing the gist of the whole matter. They were forty or fifty slips denouncing President Garfield. It was living on such ideas as these that I was finally impelled on to shoot the president with my inspiration."

Col. Corkhill interposed again, saying, "If it will favor you to get through to-day, I will send for them."

During a momentary lull in proceedings, Guiteau again tried to make a personal explanation, saying he had used the expression yesterday that "Julius" was too suggestive of the negro race, and for that reason he had dropped it from his name. His prejudice was begotten twenty years ago. He meant no disrespect to any person or any race, particularly not to the colored race, for they were more highly thought of than the white race now-a-days.

Scoville continued reading Guiteau's letters. He read one letter written by Guiteau to his father, in which he spoke of having gotten into some trouble, and in which he asked for money.

Guiteau explained the letter, saying "one of my clients, a miserable little whelp, had me arrested on account of a little difference of twenty dollars between us. As soon as the district attorney's attention was called to the matter I was released. I never ought to have been arrested, but it got into the papers and did me a good deal of harm. I had been in the theology business sometime and, as usual, was out of money. That's all there was in that."

As the reading of the letter was concluded Guiteau again interrupted, saying, "I never got much from my father. He got down on me because I left the Oneida community. We could never after that agree on that miserable, stinking community business. I'm mad every time I think of it. It kept me out of fellowship with my father up to the time of his death."

Scoville, resuming, alluded to Guiteau's career as a politician, and drew the conclusion that his intellect was deficient. This view aroused the prisoner at once, and he began a series of interruptions, protesting against Scoville's conclusions as false. When reference was made to his running around from one committee to another seeking to be employed as a campaign speaker and his failure to obtain recognition was mentioned Guiteau shouted angrily:

"It was not because I had no ability, but I was not known. I had ideas but not reputation. They wanted big guns like Gen. Grant and Senator Conkling. Men who would draw." Then in direct contradiction to his counsel's declaration to the jury yesterday that Guiteau was a man who never made a joke in his life, he looked up with an amused smile and added, "I presume I'd draw now?" This provoked general laughter, which was promptly suppressed by the judge, who struggled to disguise the smile upon his own features.

Scoville continued to address the court at some length, but was very frequently interrupted by Guiteau.

Col. Corkhill arose to protest against the interruptions of the prisoner, when Guiteau waved his hand to him patronizingly and said:

"It is not necessary to make any remarks, Colonel. Just let the matter drop."

Scoville was willing to agree to any measures the district attorney might suggest to restrain the prisoner.

Davidge desired to suggest a way to prevent outbreaks. He attributed them entirely to Scoville's course in commenting on evidence already submitted and his attempt to argue from it mental infirmity on the part of the prisoner.

Scoville concluded the opening without further interruption or incident.

At the request of the district attorney, witnesses for the defense were excluded from the court room with the exception of Mrs. Scoville. The prosecution, at the request of Mr. Scoville, made an exception in her case.

The first witness for defense, H. N. Burton, was then examined. He testified that he did not think the prisoner so deranged as to be irresponsible; he thought him not deranged, but very badly arranged. No cross examination of this witness was necessary.

H. M. Davis, of Erie, Penn., testified to a knowledge of the insanity of one of Guiteau's aunts.

Thompson Wilcox, of Freeport, Ill., knew Guiteau's father and described his peculiarities.

John A. Rice, of Minter, Wis., practicing physician for two years, testified that he examined the prisoner in 1876, and came to the conclusion that he was insane, but his insanity was emotional rather than intellectual. There appeared to be an impairment of judgment, but not much, if any, impairment of intellect. He told his friends Guiteau ought to be secluded. Witness also treated Guiteau's father, but did not consider him insane.

The prisoner—I think we have had enough of this kind of talk.

To Scoville, who tried to keep him quiet—"Keep quiet yourself."

To the court—"The fact is, that during the fall of 1875 I spent several months trying to get hold of the Chicago Inter Ocean. I exhausted myself on them, and along in the spring I had not much time for business. Mr. Scoville had a very fine farm and country seat in Wisconsin, and I went out there in the summer of 1878 to spend a couple of months. I did try to do some farming work to pay for my board. That's all there is in that kind of talk. I went back to Chicago and opened a law office and did well there. I always did well with law when I stuck to my business."

The district attorney objected to questions put by Scoville to witnesses.

The prisoner to the district attorney: "I hope you gentlemen will insist upon order in this matter and not allow this kind of thing to go on. It has no bearing in this case at all and I will not have it."

Witness was asked further as to Guiteau's troubles with Mrs. Scoville.

The prisoner: "It is not true; I never made any trouble with anybody. I want absolute truth, and when the defense comes in with such nonsense I want to protest against it, and I want you gentlemen," addressing counsel for prosecution, "to sustain me in it."

Davidge—We'll get it all right.

The prisoner—Very well.

Scoville (to witness)—Did you form any opinion as to whether he was sane or insane?

The prisoner—I object. The witness is not an expert.

After recess the witness again took the stand; did not see Guiteau after he ran away from Scoville's house at Beaver Lake, Wis.

The prisoner—I returned to Chicago and opened a law office. I did not run away.

Frank L. Union of Boston, testified hiring Guiteau for Investigator Hall. His bill proclaimed: "Do not fail to hear one Chas. J. Guiteau, a little giant from the west. He will show that two-thirds of the race are going down to perdition."

The prisoner—That is a liberal estimate. [Laughter.]

Witness—There were about fifty persons at the lecture. At the end of half an hour the lecturer evidently became disgusted with himself and left in a great hurry.

The prisoner—I was disgusted at the audience.

Witness—After he had gone the audience agreed the man was crazy. Guiteau came next day and asked for the hall, and he said he was not crazy, but inspired; that God was his father and direct counsellor, and he did nothing wrong. He said in a serious manner, that he belonged to the firm of Jesus Christ & Company, and he was sure witness was doomed. [Laughter.] He said he knew the way to heaven and hell, and if witness did what he told him, he would go to heaven; if not, to hell.

Question—[by Davidge]—Suppose at the time of the lecture Guiteau had struck you, would you have struck back?

Answer—No.

The prisoner—I don't strike persons.

Witness said he appeared as a witness impelled by reading Scoville's appeal for witnesses.

Mary L. Lockwood of Washington stated the prisoner had boarded at her house in March, 1881. The only reason she knew for his leaving was he did not pay his board.

Prisoner—I was there a month. I paid $5 and I owed her $10. They are very nice ladies. That is all there is about it. Tell everybody that it you want to.

Scoville—What was the particular occasion of his leaving?

Witness—He transacted his business with the head waiter.

The prisoner—There was nothing said at all. I got the money and paid $5, the rest I had used. I stayed a week or two longer on the strength of that and that is all about it. This kind of evidence is irrelevant and I object to it. [Laughter.] (After a pause.) I presume there were people in the house who thought I was a little cranky. There is no doubt about that at all. If you want to prove it, prove it by them. I had not have any conversation with the ladies. It was all done by notes. They were too kind-hearted and polite to say anything about board bills and that is all about it. I want the facts. They are very nice ladies, Christian ladies and good people every way. It was a good place to board. [Laughter.] Gen. ... and a lot of high-toned people boarded there and I recommend it as a boarding house.

Witness stated that Guiteau was absent in his manner at the table and there was a want of quiet ...

Prisoner—I did not know anything about the people at the table and of course I kept my mouth shut. I did not enter into conversation with them. That was all the trouble.

Norwood Damon, of Boston, who attended the lecture in Investigator Hall, said all he could remember ... that the lecturer was tost [illegible] ... and the rest of mankind generally would go down to perdition. ...

Gen. Woodford, of Michigan, testified to Mrs. Scoville's charging [illegible] ... Guiteau ... Witness ... up more ... and ... Cross examination was very searching, and the story of the axe scene with Mrs. Scoville having been again alluded to, the prisoner declared it to be a lie, "That was the short way he put it. He had used no angry words to his sister at all, although no doubt she thought so. As a matter of fact it was all nonsense."

In direct examination reference was made to the incident of Guiteau's saying he ... trees.

Prisoner—I remember hearing of that scrap business, but I didn't care anything about it. I was studying theology at the time.

Court adjourned till Friday.

Testimony on Guiteau's Insanity.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 22.—The Gazette prints an interview with Mrs. Dunmire, formerly wife of Guiteau, and Mrs. Julia Wilson, of Leadville, said to be a relative, but certainly well acquainted with Guiteau. These women are on the way to Washington as witnesses in the trial. Mrs. Dunmire had been twice subpoenaed to go to Washington, and obeyed the summons. She was sent for by the prosecution. To a question whether she regarded Guiteau insane when he was her husband (from 1869 to 1874) she answered, "Oh, no; he was of very peculiar temperament and very irritable, but was perfectly accountable for all he did. He was not in any way less sane than most men are. He was very vain and liked to have people talk about him, and always enjoyed any kind of notoriety. Why he enjoys all this notoriety he has now through the papers and to think the people of the United States are talking about him. He never mentioned insanity in his family and would have resented such a suggestion from others." Mrs. Wilson, who is well known as a worker in religious circles, was weary and declined to give any hint as to what she would testify to. She merely said she knew Guiteau when he was a child. His mother died when he was young and he grew up as any boy would without proper restraint. His family was an honorable one and felt deeply the disgrace he had brought on their name. These witnesses will reach Washington in the morning.

Ben. Butler to Take a Hand.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Mr. Scoville is now very confident that Gen. Ben. Butler will take part in the defense of Guiteau before the trial ends. It is reported that in view of this probability printed copies of the testimony are sent regularly to him every day.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

The Residuary Legatee of the Garfield Administration—His Political Future.

[Special to Chicago Times.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—James G. Blaine will retire from the position of secretary of state at the close of this month. He has no intention at present of going abroad. He will remain during the winter in Washington, and devote himself to preparing for the next national convention. His elegant house in the neighborhood of Castle Stewart is nearly completed. It faces toward the south, and stands in the center of a large open space, looking, on the one side, toward the P street circle, and the other toward the heights of Georgetown and the Potomac. The site of the house is a beautiful one, in the extreme northwest part of the most fashionable portion of the city. The building, when completed, will have cost its owner $90,000. The material is a handsome dark-red brick, trimmed with fanciful stone carvings. The style is massive and in the best taste. Twenty-five thousand dollars, probably, will be spent in furnishing. When completed, as it will probably be by Jan. 1, the residence will be one of the centers of the fashion and intellect of the capital. Mr. Blaine is

A PRINCELY ENTERTAINER,

And one of the most popular of all the public men who have moved in Washington society. He knows well the full weight of the social side of Washington, and through elegant dinners and brilliant receptions understands how to cement and strengthen ties made by his extreme popularity. Indeed, the man's manner and address please and interest all with whom he is brought in contact. For the first time in many years Mr. Blaine will occupy a non-official position. No one, however, thinks that this will detract from his strength or popularity. He has large means. By the well-informed his wealth is estimated at over $1,000,000. In financial speculations he has always proven as bold as in politics. One of his greatest sources of revenue has been from lucky ventures in coal mines in Pennsylvania. His knowledge of that state and his intimate acquaintance with its leading men have enabled him from time to time to invest the sums at his disposal as to secure him a large fortune. He is now one of the leading speculators interested in the development of the coal mines of West Virginia. He purchased an interest in the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad several years ago, in company with

A SENATORIAL SYNDICATE

Headed by Senator Davis of West Virginia, looking toward the opening up of these coal mines. From reports one can readily believe that he will find here as profitable a venture as the one that brought him such a revenue in the fields of Pennsylvania. He stands to-day the leading representative of the Garfield administration, the opponent of the stalwarts in the republican party. His friends were not at all satisfied with his career in the senate. They feel that he never succeeded there in making a real place for himself; that he never approached anything like his magnificent leadership in the house. Shortly before Mr. Blaine's retirement from the senate he himself realized that he had begun wrong. He had changed his policy toward the last and become more conservative and studious, and took greater pains to adapt himself to the more elevated tone of the senate. His experience as secretary of state has been valuable, and his success much greater than even his friends could have anticipated.

A DISTINGUISHED FOREIGN MINISTER,

Who has served many years abroad, gave the Times correspondent the other evening a general idea of the manner in which his reports to Mr. Blaine had been received. He said: "Without going into details, which would be manifestly improper, I can aver this. I had many important suggestions to make as to our foreign policy. I fancied, at least, that I had found many ways by which this government could improve its condition abroad, and to every suggestion made by me I found in Mr. Blaine the most ready and even eager listener. I do not think I ever met a man in public life who seemed to have acquired, in so short a time, such a comprehensive knowledge of foreign affairs. He took in everything almost without explanation, and realized even more than I the importance of certain facts, which I had to communicate. It was a little different when I came to make my report to Gen. Garfield. I must confess President Garfield was a trifle bored with what I had to say to him, and listened only in the most perfunctory way. Mr. Blaine was not satisfied with our one interview, but he followed me up with the most persistent system of cross-examination until he had exhausted all the knowledge that I could give him upon the various subjects in which he was interested. He has proceeded in the same fashion, I dare say, with every foreign minister or representative with whom he has been brought in contact. During this last year he has become

A CLOSE STUDENT.

I regard him to-day as one of the strongest men in this country. Joined to his wonderful personal popularity, he is now adding the fruits of study and of defeat bravely borne, and I have no doubt that when the next national convention arrives he will be one of the most formidable candidates to the republican party. He is really stronger in my judgment, out of office than in it."

This same gentleman went on further to say that Mr. Blaine at present was avoiding everything in the way of antagonisms. He is on good terms with Mr. Arthur, and will remain so if Mr. Arthur himself is willing. There are dark pages in Mr. Blaine's history, but it now belongs so utterly to the past that it would be difficult to bring them up effectively against him in a campaign. He is the sole residuary legatee of the Garfield administration. He will joint this claim to his own, and carefully prepare for the future, which now looks so brilliant to him. His health, which for a time seemed so feeble, and which has fluctuated up and down with his varying fortunes, is now upon the mend. His eye is clear and bright, and the deadly pallor of his complexion is being replaced by a better one and a more healthful color. While he will make his headquarters at Washington, he will probably at various times visit different sections of the country. He has in contemplation a trip throughout the south, which may be made within the next year. His relations with the southern capitalists in Virginia will prove a good introduction, and perhaps pave the way for investments farther south. Being out of politics, he loses nothing by any of the blunders of those in power. His position is therefore regarded by himself as one of the best possible for success at the coming convention.

SPOKAN OR SPOKANE?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I have read in your issue of to-day, November 23d, your remarks concerning the dropping or keeping of the final e in writing and printing the word Spokane. If you want to know how the word was pronounced by the Indians, and how it was written by the R. R. company and officers in early time, I will tell you, as an early pioneer of 1838, that the Indians always pronounced the word, and the officers of said company always wrote it without a final e. To write it with a final e is to change and corrupt the word, for there is a great difference between Spokan and Spokane. Spokan is the true original Indian name, which the people of the Fall and surrounding country should be in earnest to keep uncorrupted; thus Spokan.

THE REMEDY TESTED.

PORTLAND, Nov. 22, 1881.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In 1871 I caught the smallpox from nursing a servant who had the disease in its worst form. My medical attendant, a village apothecary, treated me in the manner described by a correspondent in your paper a day or two since, viz., a drink made of cream tartar dissolved in warm water, sweetened to the taste, and drink when thirsty. The room was kept dark. A fresh pitcher full of the mixture was placed at my bed-side daily. I took no nourishment except weak tea and crackers, and of those very little. In nine days from the date of my attack I was well. The same practitioner treated many patients at the same time, without losing one; although several—... recovered ... convalescence.

INGERSOLL AND IRRELIGION.

Judge Jere Black Returns to the Charge in the Religious Discussion With the Great Atheist. He Defends Himself from the Charge of Being a "Bigot"—Strong Arguments for the Christian Religion.

Judge Jere Black writes to the Philadelphia Press, in answer to Bob Ingersoll's latest chapter on the discussion between them regarding the most subject ... After relating how he was induced to enter the discussion, Judge Black says:

This is no personal wrangle with Mr. Ingersoll. He has said nothing offensive about me. His indignation at finding himself confronted, not by a professional theologian, but by a layman who applied the judicial test to his assertions was natural and expressed with tolerable moderation. On the other hand, I tried, and I think I tried successfully, to confine myself rigidly to the square issue between us. A just or even an intelligent criticism could not be made without some reference to his mental peculiarities, which, with habits of shallow thinking and even talking, made him an utterly incompetent judge of the subject he pretended to argue. But I found the proofs of this within the four corners of his own paper. There, also, I learned that he was without any acknowledged standard of right or wrong. It was legitimate to notice that, because it acquitted satisfactorily for his other utterances.

Neither is there any question of partisan politics between us. I have certain political convictions, which you may call prejudices if you will. But whether they are well or ill founded, they have no manner of connection with the subject matter of Mr. Ingersoll's diatribe against Christianity. I believe, and have often expressed the belief, that religion and politics cannot be mingled together without endangering both. The most perfect system of human government that ever was invented by the wit of man and the holiest religion that God has revealed to his creatures when united together form a monstrous compound highly injurious to the best interests of the human race. Such a union is pronounced by Christ and his apostles to be impure, and the fathers of this republic so shaped their fundamental law as to make it a wall of perfect partition between them. Without such complete separation there can be no security for either civil liberty or the rights of conscience in matters of religion. The worst form of this adulterous connection is not assumed when a legal union is formed between church and state. It is when a popular party in a free government undertakes to mingle its coarse interests and its vulgar passions with the religious sentiments of the people. That is what pollutes and falsifies both. The history of the world, and especially that of our own country, has been written in vain if this be not the lesson it teaches.

These convictions not only disarm me of the power to repel Mr. Ingersoll's assaults by a political argument, but force me to admit, for the purposes of this case, that he is right on all the points of that kind which he chooses to bring in. I can do that, argumenti gratia, without affecting the real question in controversy.

He thought he was striking a powerful blow at the Almighty when he showed that the Jewish constitution contained a provision which conflicted with the platform of the abolitionists. They had determined and resolved that under all circumstances, at all times and everywhere the toleration of slavery or servitude for life was a crime. By this and by other means not now to be described they got money, power and great personal consequence for themselves and their fellows. Mr. Ingersoll could not trust them to unite with him in or anything else that diminished the profits of their business. Directly before him he had the successful example of Demetrius, the silversmith, who raised a tremendous uproar against the gospel of Christ by simply bellowing out: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." "Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth."

I could only protest that these appeals to the interest and passions of a political party were unfair. Diana of the Ephesians and Yankee abolitionism may both have been great, and they were great in the sense of being popular, but that does not prove that the gospel of God is a pernicious imposture. The Jewish constitution, while tolerating the enslavement of savages in Judea, and the rest of the abolition canons which condemned it in America, might both be right, since the two systems were not to be judged by one another, each should be considered with proper reference to circumstances widely different. But the suggestion that the infallible God must be believed to have prescribed on just grounds without impugning the righteousness of the abolitionists met with no favor. The practiced demagogue cannot forego the tricks of the trade, and so he takes the panegyric of his political faction an excuse for casting contempt in the face of his Maker and for insulting the faith and reason of all who believe in Christ. The parrot thought that the judgment of all the earth did not fit him with rancor, which he pours out over page after page, and then repeats it again and again;

Unpacks his heart with words
And falls to cursing like a very drab—
A scullion—

I have said this much about the slavery point, not as an answer to Mr. Ingersoll, but because I will not have it understood, if I can help it, that I permitted or provoked the introduction of partisan politics into the discussion of a religious subject.

These furious outbreaks of deliberate abuse upon God, his laws and institutions do not disturb anyone's intellectual belief or at all diminish the awful reverence which Christians feel for the supreme object of his adoration. Mr. Ingersoll thinks he is raising a storm on the ocean of thought; he is not producing a ripple. He is merely doing the part of a common scold, to whom the idle listen for the sport of the thing, while others, taking counsel of their outraged feelings, think him a nuisance that ought to be abated. This is, perhaps, not very easy to do. A woman, for such an offense, could be ducked, under the rule of the ancient law, but when a comrade is vixatrix of the male gender vexes the peace of the neighborhood in this way the remedy is difficult and doubtful.

To learn how gratuitous these ... are—how he scolds for the mere sake of scolding—look at his fanfare made on polygamy. By he unaided influence of the church alone this vice has been extirpated completely and perfectly. In Christian countries the universal rule is that one man shall be the husband of one wife and no more; and it is neither the rule of the practice anywhere else on the face of the globe. Now, a person who in ordinary sense must see that the

MORAL MERIT OF CHRISTIANITY

In this respect is directly proportioned to the magnitude of the evil from which it has relieved human society. But Mr. Ingersoll takes to blacken the character of the Christian religion by railing at the bad practice which it has opposed and destroyed. If he had designed at monogamous marriage, which Christianity upholds, his act, though unjust, might have had an apparent object not altogether preposterous. Indeed, monogamy is as sure to incur vulgar vituperation as polygamy. When an unclean mind expects itself to imagine what may take place, it is as easy to talk about brutality and the animal degradation of woman in one case as another. To the beastly all things are beastly. In point of fact, the great body of unbelievers have denounced the Christian institution of marriage with especial bitterness. To tie one man and one woman together by a bond which nothing but death can dissolve is, in their opinion, not only unjust in ... immoral, but a base and brutal tyranny which imposes a degrading restraint upon the natural rights of men and women to love and cohabit with whom they please. This is a prime and prominent part of the atheistic theory, everywhere advocated by the regular organs and its greatest disciples. In France, where their societies are compact and powerful, they define their creed substantially thus: 1. There is no God. 2. Religion is a lie. 3. Property is theft. 4. Love must be free. 5. Marriage is slavery. 6. Children belong to the state, and not to anybody in particular.

This is the "gospel of dirt." I do not say that Mr. Ingersoll swallows the whole ... he loves, or at least practices, the Christian doctrine on the subjects of marriage, paternity, and property, not because he is bound by the divine commandment, but because he feels like it. Others rejecting as he does the "golden wand of the law," have an equal right to take their own feelings as the measure of righteousness. So one set of atheists curses marriage and another blackguards polygamy, and they are both right if there be no God above all and over all.

I do not intend this as an excuse for the answer which I would have made if the presiding genius of the Review had been propitious. My principal object is to show that his "straddle abuse" amounts to absolutely nothing. A reader who would prove that in every line of his article he has either falsified history or applied it as erroneous interpretation. But I am tempted not to quit without giving a sample of his efforts at scientific reasoning. If he does not deny the existence of a God his occupation is gone. The object therefore, of his highest ambition ever since he took the stump against Christianity has been and is to which shows that the world has a maker and a moral governor. This being his great central point on which all other points must turn, he has, of course, laid himself out to do his very best for it. Let us see what he has achieved.

I thought I was giving a true and accurate account of his theory when I said that he regarded the universe as natural, that "it came into being of its own accord," that "it made its own laws at the start and afterward improved itself considerably by spontaneous evolution." But he denies that this a true exposition of his views, and he exercises his decided right to declare them again more sharply than he did before. Now he says that the universe did not come into being at all; it always was, nor did it make its own law, for it has no laws.

If the natural universe is steady, just as it is now, from all time and eternity, there is, to be sure, not much chance for a creator to have done any work. ... the ... is ... preserved ... without any rule or regulation ... then there is ... and ... to ... no ... there ... a ... being ... not ... of existence.

For the proposition that the universe always was ... without ... that it ... according to his ideas. This he ... cannot ... defeat ... direct and ... and ... opposed. A ... of mankind ... all ... as ... the ... the glorious ... Earth ... support ... happens ... will ... an ... of ... is ...

He ... and ... has the scale ... that ... is ... laws. The ... no ... in ... with ... certainty ... is ... always ... that ... a ... be ... relative ... ... certain effects favorable or unfavorable to life and health. Mr. Ingersoll's idea is that these are not the results of law or any sort of intelligent prearrangement, but they are

PHENOMENA WHICH HAPPEN,

And the world is by mere accident prevented from falling into chaos. In his wisdom he decides "as matter of fact," that there is no rule back of the phenomenon which a controlling power compels the same matter to obey; it merely happens, but it happens so uniformly that it creates the idea of law in our minds, which is, however, a mere delusion. If Galileo and Newton and Kepler and all the other philosophers, great and small, have been seduced into the weak belief that the material universe is under the reign of law, it is rare good fortune for a personage who, by merely turning the Drummond light of his intellect on the subject, at once exposes the blunders of the ignorant living and the barbarian dead.

Let no man misunderstand or misrepresent Mr. Ingersoll. It is not in irony nor to point a sarcastic jest that he denies the operation of natural laws upon matter. He is in serious earnest, and if he does not actually believe what he says his simulation of sincerity is very perfect. To make him clear he takes a simple case. Water, he says, always runs down hill, not because there is a law behind it—law does not cause the phenomenon, but the phenomenon causes the idea of law to exist in our minds—but that idea is on this side of the fact. It follows that Newton must have been grossly mistaken when he said that the falling of water and other bodies toward the center of the earth was caused by the law of gravitation.

Mr. Ingersoll supposes that he is imputing an absurdity to me when he says "Mr. Black probably thinks the difference in the weight of rocks and clouds is produced by law." Undoubtedly I do. I learned in my infancy (and I have "kept the credulity of the cradle") that this difference is caused by that same law of gravitation, operating according to rules which are perfectly understood by all tolerably well informed men. I will go further and confess that I think it a most beneficent law which prevents the rocks from flying about through the air and the clouds from becoming immovably fixed in the earth. Our great creator ought to be adored and thanked for making such an arrangement. But this only proves to Mr. Ingersoll that I am a believer in the "monstrous and miraculous, the impossible and immoral."

Mr. Ingersoll is much accused of plagiarism. Whether this be true or not of his declamatory spouting, this notion that the material world is not governed by law is without doubt original. It never entered any human head before, and I think that in all future time it will find no lodgment in the mind of any reasonable being.

Another way he has of reaching the atheistic conclusion. I do not say that I know what he wants to be at. But as well as I can understand him, he asserts that the universe could not have a design because we cannot trace back the designer to his own origin; the world was not made because we cannot tell who made the maker. The mechanism of a watch is so curious that "it must," says he, "have a maker," but, he adds, the watchmaker himself is more wonderfully made than the watch, and hence he infers that he also must have had a maker, since the necessity of a creator increases with the wonder of a creature. He is unquestionably, though perhaps unconsciously, right in this. It makes a demonstration as complete as mathematics that man was created by "some pre-existent and self-conscious being of power and wisdom to us inconceivable." But instead of accepting this plain, palpable, and necessary consequence of his own logic, he turns his back upon the conclusion and begins to maunder over his own ability to understand how a designer could be without an anterior design, and telling how hard it is for him to see the plan or design in earthquakes and pestilences, and how the justice of God is not visible to him in the history of the world. This silly trash he thinks sufficient to repel the irresistible proofs of a creator which he himself has adduced, and which by all fair and unperverted minds are received as conclusive.

Humbugged Again.

I saw so much said about the merits of hop bitters, and my wife, who was always doctoring and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some, I concluded to be humbugged again, and I am glad I did, for in less than two months' use of the bitters my wife was cured, and she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T., St. Paul.—Pioneer Press.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 24, 1881.

INSANITY AND CRIME.

Guiteau's conduct since his trial opened has fully developed the character which had been attributed to him before it began. He is an individual of unsound mind; he never had proper intellectual or moral balance; his faculties have been perverted to evil; he is a compound of rationality and insanity, and yet is not so insane as to be without moral and legal responsibility for his acts. Many are clearly insane, and therefore as clearly irresponsible. But this case is wholly different. Its prominence brings before the country and the world a question of vast importance to society, namely, the legal status of morbid impulse to the commission of crime.

Dr. William A. Hammond of New York, though criticised for certain opinions delivered by him in regard to the treatment of President Garfield,—opinions which were specially objected to by some of his medical brethren since he had never seen the patient—is nevertheless an able physician and writer. He has made a long and patient study of insanity in all its manifestations. An elaborate treatise by him on diseases of the nervous system has passed through many editions in America, and its recognized value has caused it to be translated into all the leading languages of Europe. The views of such a writer on criminal responsibility in cases of partial mental aberration must be regarded as worthy of consideration. An article on this subject by Dr. Hammond, in the November number of the International Review, supplies just what the general reader needs for formation of a judgment upon cases like that presented in the trial of this assassin.

Dr. Hammond does not consider in this article those cases of clear and positive insanity about which there can be no mistake. He takes the class in which morbid impulses are conspicuous,—people with delusions as to their mission as reformers, messengers of God, etc.,—individuals with intense egotism and a desire for notoriety manifestly abnormal in character; with tendencies toward the performance of eccentric and unusual acts; with a total disregard of the restraints upon individual indulgence which a decent sense of the opinions of mankind requires, and with excessively developed passions which lead them to the commission of various atrocious and even bestial crimes. Yet these persons often show little or no want of intellectual power. They are insane from a medical standpoint; but they know right from wrong, they know legal acts from illegal ones, and should therefore be held to accountability for crime. Hence though an individual may be medically insane, he is not a lunatic in the legal sense. His brain is diseased, either temporarily or permanently; his mind is not in all respects normal in its action; and yet he is responsible for his acts. Guiteau's counsel often speaks of the "progress of legal science in the treatment of the insane." But any departure from the just and simple principles above stated is not progress, but a sympathetic weakness which rejects the clear dictates of judgment and reason.

It is impossible to concede that every manifestation of insanity or mental disorder can excuse a homicide. There are phases of unsound mind which must let in the element of legal accountability. Thus, as Dr. Hammond puts it, any individual having natural capacity to know that an act which he contemplates is contrary to law and the moral sense of the community, and that the person who commits such act is liable to punishment, should be deemed legally responsible and dealt with accordingly. It has, indeed, often been the doctrine of courts that where one is under a morbid or insane delusion and commits a crime he should be exonerated of responsibility. Dr. Hammond says the position is too broad. It depends upon the nature of the delusion whether a person is innocent or not. If a man who believes that he has a glass body or is an emperor commits burglary, he should not be allowed to plead insanity, as his morbid delusion is not in the direction of the crime. This writer goes still further, and holds that where a person is under a morbid delusion to kill, and is conscious of the existence in his mind of the impulse, he is bound to do everything in his power to render the accomplishment of the propensity impossible. He should immediately have himself placed under restraint. And if he does not he ought to be held as morally and legally accountable as any ruffian who in an effort to rob a stage kills the driver. The plea "I could not help it," is one that every criminal may urge, and when it stands alone in the history of an otherwise sane individual, should be absolutely disregarded by judge and jury.

The question, therefore, in the case of a criminal, Dr. Hammond justly says, should not be, "Is he insane?" but, "Is he responsible?" On this principle the law should be applied, construed and administered. When this is done, and done upon an invariable rule, a check will be put upon the homicidal inclinations of individuals like this assassin. Because this distinction has not been observed the testimony of medical experts in cases of alleged insanity has often bewildered or misled juries, defeated justice, deprived society of protection against persons who have a morbid impulse to kill, and caused the public to denounce with bitterness the abuse of the plea of insanity as a defense for crime.

THE CHARLATAN PRESS-GANG.

The following, under the head of "Too Meddlesome," is the Salem Statesman's leading editorial of Wednesday, Nov. 23:

> The East Oregonian is quite too meddlesome. It says: "The Oregonian denies that it has been sold. Well, this may be so, but there is one very patent fact—it has either been bought or bought off. Now, which is it?"

Isn't it just possible that the Salem Statesman also is "quite too meddlesome?" We shall furnish it a glass in which it may see itself; and as the Portland Standard has a so made the above do service as one of the "able editorials" for which it covets fame, it may take a peep into the same reflector.

These organs, together with the concern of fraudulent name from which they copied the above, represent utterly unprincipled and irresponsible journalism. They are so entirely worthless that there is no demand for them; not one of the whole class can live by legitimate earnings; for, as they are not wanted by the public they have no earnings worth speaking of, but live by shabby shifts, miserable devices and false pretenses. As there is no demand whatever for these imitation newspapers, they are forced on the few who do receive them by a system which may be called a mixture of beggary, importunity and bulldosing. They are enterprising in nothing but in the one fell purpose of living somehow by preying on a suffering public, unable to render any equivalent even for the paltry sums they obtain under cover of subscriptions and advertisements. The Statesman for years has been the catspaw of political backs. One after another has put his money into it and received its homage, carrying the load till he found it too burdensome and then leaving the distressed organ to hunt a new master. The Standard's position has always been equally contemptible and ignominious. It is no nearer being a newspaper than it was on the day it started; nobody ever expects to see anything in it, and in this alone the paper never disappoints them. Here now we reach the point of the present matter. Corporations are constructing extensive lines of railway in Oregon and Washington. This is the service which the country has wanted, striven for, and hoped to obtain for twenty-five years. But all the organs of the piratical press-gang, either in the hope of making the corporations pay them money, or of making undiscerning people believe they are their champions against "monopoly," are raising the cry that the railroads are going to oppress the people and ruin the country. They don't want the great railway system now in progress completed, alleging as a reason that it will be a monopoly—just as if any one ever supposed it could be anything else. The result of an expenditure of one hundred million dollars in an undertaking is not likely to be anything but a monopoly, because it is not the easiest thing in the world to raise another hundred millions to compete with it or fight it. What then? Are we resolved to have no railroads since monopoly is to be the result of their construction?

Now the charge is that the newspaper, which has too much sense and too much respect for the public intelligence to join in this idiotic clamor, has either been "bought" or "bought off." As the organs of beggary and venality are always on the hunt for a purchaser, this comes naturally as their first and last thought. But the legitimate newspaper, which is sought because it is wanted and lives by an honorable business, does not seek the favor of corporations on the one hand nor make a fool of itself by silly denunciation of them on the other.

The state has undoubted power of control over all railways within its limits. It can deal with wrongs and abuses which may call for its interposition. It does not always do this intelligently; but still it has the power. The present time is the era of railroad building in Oregon. That of railroad operation is yet to come. Every person of sense wants construction to go on as rapidly as possible. Monopoly will be the result, of course. Nothing else could have been expected from the first. Therefore the everlasting howl of charlatan newspapers against monopoly, the motive of which is not capable of misinterpretation, is fatuous and disgusting to the last degree.

AGAINST VACCINATION.

An anti-vaccination congress has just terminated a four days session in Cologne, Germany. It was attended by a large number of scientific gentlemen, some of whom, are noted as specialists in those branches of science which give particular attention to such diseases as small pox and methods of their eradication. Several of the speakers devoted much attention to what they considered an irrational treatment of the disease and condemned in unmeasured terms the system of compulsory vaccination carried out in many places. It was alleged upon evidence said to have been gathered from statistics of many continental cities, that those who had been vaccinated were more liable to the disease than those who relied upon proper attention to cleanliness and diet, and claimed that the true method, and the only one, which would prevent small pox or any other zymotic disease from becoming general was by removing the sources of such diseases,—by sanitary measures. The congress gave it as their opinion that small pox, when rationally treated was not relatively a dangerous disease, that vaccination does not afford immunity against it, but on the contrary, being itself an infusion of zymotic molecules, is an excitant of it; and that it not infrequently introduces other vile diseases much more dangerous than small pox, the virus never being free from such contamination. A vast range of facts relating to the historical, social and scientific aspects of the subject were dwelt upon by the members, and letters read from many of the most prominent physicians in Europe and America sympathizing with the work of the congress. Nevertheless, there has been too much experience as to the efficacy of vaccination to allow these theorists any real standing. What they say as to sanitary measures is highly proper; but vaccination ought to be added to cleanliness and proper food as a further precaution and prophylactic. The opposition to it is one of those "scientific hobbies" so prevalent everywhere.

Wool-growers of California complain that the choice wools of that state are badly dealt with by buyers, who are charged with mixing them with inferior wools. A meeting of wool-growers of Mendocino county was held a few days since to devise means for protection of their industry against this practice. The wool of the southern part of the state is notoriously inferior to that grown north of the latitude of San Francisco; yet the mixing of these wools is said to be a common practice. It is done in San Francisco. Of course, one object is to keep down the price of the superior wools. Another is to raise the grade of the inferior descriptions. The wool of Oregon and Washington is shipped mainly through San Francisco. How much of it is dealt with in this way cannot be told; but no doubt the practice is a common one. It is one of the devices of wool speculators to prevent growers of fine wools from obtaining the prices which their product ought to command. It enables the speculator to say to the grower, "Your wool is worth only so much in Boston; here are the quotations, and we can give only such or such a price." If the best wools of this coast could go unmixed into the eastern market, it would be a great gain to those whose enterprise, situations and breeds of sheep enable them to produce the higher grades of wool.

If any one has doubted that "stalwartism" was responsible for the murder of President Garfield the defense set up for Guiteau ought to cure that error. The assassin was impelled to the act by "stalwart" denunciation of the president, who was attacked with rancorous malignity because he had refused to obey the bosses in the distribution of spoils. Those clippings from the organs of "stalwartism" tell a tale whose infamy should forever overwhelm the spoils gang and the spoils system.

Cable advices to the Peruvian minister state that the Chilians have arrested President Calderon and his minister of foreign affairs, and taken them to Santiago, where they are now confined. What effect this move has had upon the provisional government of Peru was not learned, but it was understood that U. S. Minister Hurlbut intends to recognize Vice President Monteroy as Calderon's successor.

Scoville concluded his opening speech for the defense yesterday and examination of witnesses was begun. The tendency of their testimony is towards the opinion that Guiteau is "emotionally" but not "intellectually" insane, or, as the first witness aptly put it, he is "not deranged, but very badly arranged."

The tenor of our dispatches for the past few days indicates that Emperor William of Germany is approaching the end of a long and eventful life. His extreme age, eighty-five years, gives little hope of recovery from the illness which is evidently growing daily more alarming.

THE OREGONIAN will appear to-morrow as usual. Persons who desire the insertion of advertisements will take notice accordingly.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public is hop bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. THE CITY COUNCIL.

Douglas W. Taylor Appointed and Confirmed City Surveyor.

SALOONS-CLOSING-AT-12-O'CLOCK LAW REPEALED.

The Question of Cigarette Smoking Presented—Report of Committee on Streets—Routine Business, Etc.

The city council met in special session last night, Mayor Thompson presiding, and every member present.

NEW CITY SURVEYOR.

Mayor Thompson submitted a communication appointing Douglas W. Taylor city surveyor.

Mr. Honeyman moved to confirm.

Mr. Gerdes moved to refer to the committee on streets and public property; lost by a tie vote.

The vote on confirmation stood: Ayes, Hewett, Holman, Honeyman, Keller and Raleigh; nays, Chittenden, Gerdes, Kellogg and Nicklin.

PETITIONS, ETC.

From A. L. Lindsley and others asking for a law to prevent children from smoking cigarettes; referred to committee on health and police.

The petition was supplemented by a written opinion of Dr. P. Harvey as to the deleterious effects of cigarette smoking by an appeal from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and by addresses from Mrs. A. S. Duniway and Mrs. Torrey, who had been invited within the bar for that purpose.

From Mrs. C. Norton, asking that the grade of C street be not raised; referred to committee on sts.

From Mrs. C. Norton and others, asking that the grade of First street be not raised more than eight inches above present grade; same reference.

From C. H. Woodward and others, calling attention to the bad condition of First street south of Wood, and asking that it be planked; granted.

From W. O. Allen and others, asking that Alder street be improved from Fourth to Twelfth by planking; no action.

From Portland Macadam & Paving Company, calling attention to the fact that they held warrants amounting to $461 50 for B street improvement which were not paid for want of funds; referred to committee on streets.

REPORTS.

The committee on streets and public property reported on the several petitions and remonstrances referred to that committee, as follows:

First—That the remonstrance against the proposed improvement of North Sixth street, from G street to N street, is sufficient to defeat the proposed improvement.

Second—That the remonstrance against the proposed improvement of North Ninth street, from G street north, is sufficient to defeat the proposed improvement.

Third—We recommend that the petition of W. Beutelspacher and others for the erection of a street lamp on South Seventh street, at Caruther's line, be granted.

Fourth—We recommend that the petition of W. O. Allen for the improvement of Alder street be granted.

Fifth—We recommend that the assessment for the B-street sewer be referred back to the viewers for correction.

Sixth—We herewith present a resolution providing for the removal of the hay on platform scales on Oak street, between First and Second streets, and recommend its adoption.

Eighth—We also recommend that the surveyor be directed to survey an extension of Water street to the southern limits of the city, conforming as nearly as practicable to the macadam road, and herewith present a resolution providing therefor.

Ninth—We also recommend that the city surveyor be directed to survey an extention of Meade street, from Front to the macadam road, and herewith present a resolution providing therefor.

Tenth—We also present an ordinance appointing R. Irving as one of the assessors to assess the cost of the sewer in F street, in place of Geo. V. James, and recommend the immediate passage of the ordinance.

Eleventh—We would also call the attention of the committee on health and police to the block bounded by N. Second and N. Third, and G and N streets, and also request that said committee provide a place for the dumping of refuse matter from the streets.

Twelfth—We present resolutions providing for the improvement of Alder street from Fourth to Twelfth, and Salmon street from W. Park to Twelfth. Also a resolution for the purchase of a harness for the city horse, and recommend their adoption.

This report was adopted.

PROBABLE MURDER.

JOHN GATELY CHARGED WITH MORGAN RILEY'S DEATH.

Testimony Before the Coroner's Jury Yesterday—"I Fixed Him; What are You Going to do About it?"—Gately now in the County Jail.

An inquest was held on the remains of Morgan Riley at the residence of his family on South Front street yesterday afternoon, at about five o'clock. All the evidence, including that of the physician, tends to show that he had been foully dealt with.

The first witness called was Mrs. Gately, who testified substantially as follows:

I am a sister of Morgan Riley, and the divorced wife of John Gately. I did not know of the accident until I received word to come to the hospital. I reside at the head of the canyon on the road to the poor farm. Went to see my brother the first time Wednesday afternoon of last week. He looked very badly, and could not hear nor speak intelligibly. When I asked who had hurt him, he said the one that did it was not much account. My children being very sick, I sent for John Gately, my former husband, that he might see them. Last Saturday, on my return from the hospital, where my brother was, Gately was at my house. My mother and I began talking about the condition of my brother, when Gately asked me whether he was dead yet. I told him he was not, but that I was afraid he would not live long. Then he said, "I fixed him and he deserves all he got." About two weeks ago my brother thrashed Gately for abusing me, and Gately then threatened to kill him. I was divorced from Gately about two years ago. I do not think he meant what he said when he stated that he killed my brother, but only said it to distress me. I think he was sober at the time. I do not know where he was at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Riley was then summoned. Her testimony was simply a corroboration of the statements made by her daughter, Mrs. Gately. She also stated that Gately had repeatedly threatened Riley's life in her presence and that she thought he came to the house late Monday night, but was not certain.

John Campbell was then called and gave his statement as follows: I am a carpenter and have been doing some work for Mrs. Gately. Have also been boarding at her house. I saw Riley about a week before the accident; he was digging potatoes in Mrs. Gately's garden. The same day I saw Riley thrash Gately. He threw him down and kicked him, saying he would not stand by and see his sister abused. I never heard Gately threaten to kill Riley. When Mrs. Gately and her mother were talking about Riley's condition Saturday, Nov. 19th, I heard Gately say, "I fixed him, and I am glad of it." I think he was drunk at the time and only said it to worry Mrs. Gately.

Barney McKinney was next sworn, and stated: I am a farmer and live about eight miles from Portland. I saw Riley and Gately have a row at Mrs. Gately's house, about five weeks ago, and have not seen them together since. I was at Mrs. Gately's residence Saturday, Nov. 19th, when I heard Gately say, "I fixed him, now what are you going to do about it," speaking in reference to Riley. I told him he ought to be ashamed of himself to talk that way, when in an undertone, "keep quiet, I want to make them believe it anyhow." I am quite sure he was under the influence of liquor at the time. I saw Gately at Beaverton Monday morning, and he rode home with me, staying at my house until four o'clock that afternoon. Upon leaving he said he was going to stop all night at Mr. Forrester's, about two miles beyond. I married Mrs. Gately's sister, who is now dead. Gately returned to my house Tuesday, Nov. 22, at about one o'clock, P. M.

Dr. R. G. Rex next gave his testimony, stating: The first time I saw Morgan Riley was Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. He was then unconscious, and talking incoherently. Upon examination I found that his hip bone was broken, and he was suffering from concussion of the brain. His eyes were black and bruised, which led me to believe that he received a number of blows about the face and head, for had he bruised them in falling or striking his face against anything, it would have also bruised his forehead and nose; as it is, there is no bruise or cut upon his head or face, excepting under and around his eyes. I think it impossible that the bruises around his eyes could have been caused by a fall.

The jury was dismissed until Friday, when further evidence will be presented.

It was yesterday found that Riley had sworn out a warrant on November 8th, before Justice Petrain, for the arrest of Gately, charging him with threatening to kill. Constable Grant went to Mrs. Gately's to secure him, but found he had gone into the country. Later on Mrs. Gately told Grant that she had heard there was a warrant out for the arrest of Gately, and had told him in time for him to escape. It is a sadly mixed affair on the whole, and although it is quite evident that there has been a murder, it is still not known who committed the deed. Gately was arrested yesterday by Constable Simmons, and is now in the county jail. He will have an examination before Justice Davis to-morrow.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

How it will be Observed in this City.

A brilliant night, without a cloud, and the air just crisp enough to send the sluggish blood tingling through one's veins after a brisk walk, with every prospect of a beautiful day, was the outlook as THE OREGONIAN went to press this morning. If the state of the weather has any influence upon the human mind, Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated with a cheerfulness and enthusiasm seldom known in this land of damp autumnal weather. The usual ceremonies will be held in the various churches and several of our charitable institutions will be the scenes of exercises of an interesting nature. All banks and public offices will close in observance of the day, giving officers and employes an opportunity of enjoying its various pleasures.

TRINITY EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Services will commence at 11 o'clock A. M., and the musical portion promises to be fine. The programme of exercises will be as follows:

Processional........"Onward Christian Soldiers."
Thanksgiving Chant....................Special
Gloria Patri............................Mosenthal
Te Deum Laudamus...................Lambeliotte
Jubilate Deo..............................Barbiere
Introit—"Thanks be to God"..........Mendelssohn
Kyrie Eleison................................Kinross
Gloria Tibi..................................Kinross
Hymn 306.........."Come ye thankful people, come."
Sermon.......................Rev. G. F. Plummer
Offertory.........Trio for soprano, tenor and bass "On thee each loving soul awaits".........Haydn
Recessional—"Kronungsmarch"..............Meyerbeer

In addition to the grand organ a full orchestra will be used and the choir will be composed of the following ladies and gentlemen: Sopranos—Mesdames Corbett, Woodward, Bird, Reed, White Misses Griffin and Clark. Altos—Mrs. Kinross, Mrs. Cattle, Miss Carson. Tenors—Messrs. Franklin, Burns, Reed, Haffenden, Treadwell, Bird and McClare. Basses—Messrs. Dunholm, Atkinson, Nicoll, Trevitt, Brooker, Dawson, Schuyler and Maxwell. Mr. Coursen will preside at the organ and the whole will be under the direction of W. H. Kinross. The collection is in aid of the Good Samaritan hospital and orphanage.

AT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The services at the cathedral will commence at 9 o'clock by the solemn high mass by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Fierens, assisted by Most Rev. Archbishop Seghers and others. The choir will sing the Burdese mass under the leadership of H. L. Herman.

UNION CHURCH SERVICES.

To-day, at the usual hour for church services, 11 o'clock in accordance with the proclamation of the president of the United States and the governor of Oregon, there will be an opportunity for the people to assemble in the churches for suitable public religious observance of the day. The Presbyterian, Congregational, Taylor and Hall Street Methodist, Christian and Baptist churches, by special invitation and agreement, will hold union religious services in the Baptist church, corner of Fourth and Alder streets. The excellent choir of this church, augmented by singers from other churches, will render appropriate selections. The pastors of the several churches will be present and take some part in the exercises. Rev. John A. Gray, pastor of the Baptist church, will deliver the sermon.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHAPEL.

Divine service will begin at 11 o'clock A. M. with a thanksgiving sermon by Rev. John Rosenburg. Any offerings either in money or articles useful for the patients at Good Samaritan Hospital will be received at the chapel.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Thanksgiving services will be held this evening, to begin at half-past seven. All are invited to attend.

UNITARIAN CHURCH.

At 11 o'clock this A. M. services will be held with an appropriate discourse and the usual musical exercises.

A. O. U. W. MASQUERADE.

The demand for tickets which has prevailed, and the preparations being made, indicate one of the most numerously attended and most enjoyable entertainments at the Mechanics' pavilion this evening ever given in Portland. While the tickets have been placed within the reach of all, the arrangements are such that all undesirable applicants for admission will be turned away, but rich and poor will be treated alike and be met with equal welcome. The order itself is strong enough in this city to make a very large gathering, and the members have hosts of friends who are intending to patronize the entertainment.

By almost universal request the committee of arrangements of to-night have decided to reserve seats for those who desire to secure them. Reserved seats in the gallery, with choice of location, can be had for fifty cents. They can be secured at Morse's Palace at any time during to-day, and at the box-office at the pavilion to-night.

THE THEATER.

This afternoon the Alice Dunning Lingard company will present "The New Magdalen," with the star as "Mercy Merrick," and in the evening "Our Boys" will be given, with Miss Lingard as "Mary Melrose."

The only place in Portland where you can get the latest style of hat is at Woods', the Hatter, under the town clock.

Another medal is added to the many won by that enterprising photographer Abell. It is a silver one and is given for the best general display at the fair. Abell's photos will win anywhere.

THE STREET RAILWAY PROJECT

Considered by the City Council and Referred to a Committee of Five.

After the minutes of the last meeting had been read in the city council last night, on motion of Dr. Nicklin the regular order of business was suspended for the purpose of considering the new street railway ordinance.

The motion made at a former meeting, to refer to the committee of the whole, was reconsidered and the matter was referred to the whole council.

Dr. Nicklin moved that the ordinance be read and considered by sections.

Mr. Keller moved an amendment that the ordinance be printed in the official paper.

Mr. Hewett moved a further amendment that the ordinance be considered by sections, amended if necessary and then printed. Carried.

The first section, indicating the streets to be traversed, was then read. A motion to refer to a special committee of five, to be called a railroad committee, was lost by a vote of five to four.

Messrs. J. N. Dolph and C. H. Prescott, directors of the company were present, and upon invitation, Mr. Dolph addressed the council for a few minutes, saying that the ordinance was nearly a verbatim copy except name and dates of the one under which the First street railway operated; that his associates and himself intended, if permission were granted, to construct railway lines where they would prove the greatest public benefit; that the managers were willing to make such changes as the council might find necessary, and that they would give any reasonable obligation to provide for the public convenience. He did not care to make a speech, but was ready to answer inquiries from councilmen as questions suggested themselves.

The several sections were then read and referred to a special committee consisting of Councilmen Keller, Hewett, Holman, Gerdes and Honeyman. They will meet Monday evening at seven o'clock to further consider the matter.

CLACKAMAS COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT.

A term of the circuit court of Clackamas county was opened at Oregon City on last Monday morning and practically came to a close on yesterday evening, the judge, district attorney and Portland lawyers returning home, and but little remains to be done except to sign the records, which will be done on next Tuesday morning. The petit jury has been discharged. The grand jury was in session less than three days and returned but two true bills of indictment. The following is the criminal business disposed of during the term:

State of Oregon vs C. A. Puckett—Plead guilty to charge of assault with intent to commit rape and sentenced to the penitentiary for seven years.

State vs B. E. Patrick—Plead guilty to assault and battery and fined $25 and costs.

State vs John Richards—Convicted of selling liquor without license and fined $100 and costs.

The report of the grand jury congratulates the citizens of the county upon the small amount of criminal business and the general good health and prosperity of the people.

REALISTIC POEMS.

I.—OUT OF DEATH.

It is strange, pathetic truth,
That death, which blights the human heart,
Which tears the noblest souls apart,
And chills the blood of youth,

Whose touch is like a bitter wind
That sears the summer leaf of life,
A mournful climax to the strife
And splendor of the mind;

Is still the everlasting prop
Of radiant being, a power whereby
Now lives are born when old lives die,
Even where the old lives stop;

For, whatsoever form it takes,
Tree, flower, or fungus, worm or man,
By some imperishable plan
That nothing mars or breaks,

Life, withered at its root, is strown
Into its lifeless elements,
And is forever dying, though whence
It cometh none has shown;

Yet if it were not fashioned so,
It could not come, and earth would be
Stripped of its strong humanity,
Like the bare polar snow.

II.—HUMANITY.

Out of forgotten forms
Of beast and savage, thou
Like twilight out of storms
Hast risen, and god-like now
Is thy calm, crowned brow;

Unfaltering thou has climbed
From darkness, though thy feet
Were sore, and thy tears have timed
The years that still defeat
Hope strong as life and sweet;

Unfaltering thou shalt be
And full of a deathless fire,
For thou wert born to see
Past struggle and desire,
To conquer, to aspire—

Thy spirit was lit to read
The secret earth and skies,
Thy dauntless heart to lead
In nobler ways and wise
Life onward till it dies.

III.—PAST.

The murmur of centuries past is blown to me
Like the dullest rumble of a distant sea;

A wail of sorrow seems to faint afar
Upon the golden bosom of a star;

How darkly droops the night! A dream of death
Breathes icily through the summer's languid breath—

A dream of dead and melancholy days
When fierce life yearned for unimagined ways,

When king and priest were rulers of the earth
And manhood crawled before the crown of birth,

Dark days of ignorance, martyrdom and woe,
When thought was cursed as God's implacable foe.

Black days of black religions, bloody years
Washed with a people's unforgotten tears;

Wild agony of the past, I seem to fee
Thy passionate throbs, and all my senses reel!

IV.—SUNLESS.

How sad the nurtured earth would be
If the keen splendor of the sun,
Whereof all life is born to me
And light to every one,

Were but a black revolving mass,
Chill at its bosom as the snow,
Amid the planet globes that pass
Around its central glow—

A sun without its fire, a night
Amid the darkened calm of space;
A blind, annihilating blight
Upon the fair world's face:

The sunshine and the summer heat,
And rain and dew, the plants and flowers,
The flow of waters, and the sweet
Strong beauty of the hours

Would be unknown upon the earth;
While neither man, nor beast, nor bird
Would waken any sign of birth,
Not any song or word;

Where men have lived and suffered, fought
And toiled and conquered, there would thrive
No tender soul of love, no thought,
No single thing alive;

But the wan, lifeless earth would lie
Forever, like a death's device,
Robed in the winter of the sky
And giant gyves of ice.

—G. E. Montgomery.

Some Natural Wonders.

[Yakima Record.]

From Adam Duncan who spends the greater part of his time over on the Columbia near Priest Rapids, we learn some interesting facts in regard to natural wonders in that unsettled region. One of these wonders is described as a sort of lake or basin some four miles long and quite near the rapids. When the Columbia is at its highest this lake disappears in the ground, leaving nothing in its stead save a great number of large wells, some of them being nearly twenty feet in width. The number of these wells is estimated to be about one hundred and fifty. Passing about among them they are found to contain waters of different qualities and colors, some of them being clear, cold and agreeable in taste and filled with beautiful speckled trout, while others are bitter and black like those Stygian pools renowned in ancient fable, over which the souls of the damned were supposed to pass on their journey to the regions of torment. As the Columbia river begins to run low in its channel these wells gradually rise until they overflow and form a lake. Of the scientist, who is supposed to have a theory for all things, let us inquire, "Why is all this thus?" By what sort of subterranean, syphonic, double-back-action arrangement are these things brought about? Why should the water in the wells arise as the water in the channel of the river recedes, and why should wells so close to each other contain waters of such a different character? Another natural wonder presents itself for solution up in the neighborhood of Moses' Coolie. In the hottest part of the summer there is a place up there where huge icicles form and hang like in mid-winter from the tall rocks. By digging in among the stones or broken shale large bodies of ice are found which seem to form there in mid-summer. The water flowing from among the broken stones is about as cold as ice itself, but where it comes from and why these icicles form in mid-summer while none are to be seen there in the winter time are more conundrums. The rocky bluff slopes gradually down from the north in such a way as to receive the sun's rays in their fullest force and just back of the bluff is a level country covered with bench-grass.

Winter-Laying Hens.

[Poultry World.]

To have laying hens in winter, the first year of their lives, the pullets should be hatched early in the previous spring. Thus they grow to maturity by late fall, and after moulting they will begin to lay, frequently in October. Leghorns will commence to lay at five months old, and we have known Brahmas and Cochins to begin laying at six months. Generally speaking, however, they do not lay much till they are a month or two older. So, if your pullets are hatched out say in March or April, they will be seven or eight months of age in November, and should be ready to "lay in winter," naturally, without forcing. But they commonly do not get to laying at this time, and the reason is that they have not been properly fed with this end in view. Where you find young winter-laying hens, you may be sure they have been taken extra good care of, from the shell upward. But older hens may be put to this work, by artificial feeding, or by supplying them with highly stimulating or egg-producing food for the same purpose.

Thus, if we take a flock of one and two-year-old hens, and pen them where we can furnish them with animal and grain food, and the necessary condiments which go to create egg meat and shells—away from the ordinarily fed poultry—we can quicken them in the laying disposition, and they will commence to discharge their litters a month or six weeks earlier than they would have done had they been left to take their chances among the flock.

But this forcing is exhaustive. Nature is overhurried. It is not a healthful way for hens to lay, under this stimulating "high pressure." And they soon lay themselves out. We have known hens thus treated to produce enormous-sized eggs frequently, and also many soft-shelled ones, when being thus pushed. They can be "made to lay" in this way for a time. But it is a brief time only before they will "play out," under this hastening process. We therefore would advise those who would have laying fowls in winter time, to procure pullets that they know are seven to eight months of age, of any breed.

If they wish to bring their old hens into laying at this period, let them feed them high, in advance, keep them warm and dry, and furnish them with plenty of animal food, wheat, buckwheat and egg-producing food, for this purpose. And so it will be for the flock thus forced—a short life and a prolific one; but you may thus have winter-laying hens.

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other bitters, as it is not a whisky drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone set tea that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right try Hop Bitters.—Nunda News.

C. Horr, a special agent of the Treasury Department of the United States, on the 15th day of October, 1881, at Harrisburg, in the territory of Alaska, were seized as forfeited to the United States for the reasons and causes in said libel mentioned, and praying the usual process and monition of the said court in that behalf to be made, and that all persons interested in the said property may be cited to answer the premises, and all due proceedings being had, that the said property above mentioned may, for the causes in said libel mentioned, be condemned as forfeited to the use of the United States, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided.
